Panel Discussions (working lunch)

Panel 1: SACS Reaffirmation Reviews and Fifth-Year Interim Reports: Recent Experiences
Facilitator: Susan Paraska, Georgia Institute of Technology

Panelists:
- David Gribbin, East Georgia College (EGC) – Reaffirmation Class of 2010  (just finished “Focused Response Report”)
- Deborah Vess, Georgia College and State University (GCSU) – Fifth-Year Interim Report, 2010
- Bob Boehmer, University of Georgia (UGA) – Reaffirmation Class of 2011 (onsite visit week begins March 1, 2011)

- Discussion
  - EGC, on reaffirmation:
    - had about 12 committees working on Compliance Report starting in about 2008.
    - were able to meet deadlines, despite some missteps.
    - suggested getting chair of onsite committee down for a visit in advance to make arrangements.
  - GCSU, on Fifth-Year Interim Report:
    - one year not enough to pull together report if compliance infrastructure has not persisted. Had about 80 people working on this, because with compliance report in 2004 (Criteria) faculty had felt left out.
    - always want to concentrate on compliance certification--now updating yearly, meaning “all the time”
    - GCSU is working on assessment strategies and record-keeping, especially on QEP. Report on QEP is limited to 10 pages
    - ensure that QEP has learning outcomes that are assessable; okay to modify from initial proposal, especially if early feedback indicates that initial plan was not appropriate.

- SACS emphasizes that 5th year report is not an abbreviated report. It has fewer principles than full report, but full depth responses for each included principle are still expected.
- need to be sure to work distance education into all narratives. Including admissions policies.

  o UGA on reaffirmation:
    - goal is to improve learning environment. If you focus on this, you will end up in compliance for SACS purposes.
    - don’t focus on “compliance” –focus on multiple purposes, institutional value
    - logistical planning for onsite visit needs to be done carefully in conjunction with review team so that teams gets exposed to students, faculty, campus as you want them to see it
    - need to make sure that key figures that can answer questions are not out of town (e.g., at conferences) the week of the SACS visit
    - everyone needs to be available on the days of the visit; available and flexible for the period of the visit--expect the unexpected

- The Regents Administrative Committee on Institutional Effectiveness (RACIE), the name of the committee prior to RACEA, was an active group and was responsible for getting the previous CPR policy into place. RACIE at some point became dormant and the leadership of the BOR wanted to revive it. Members of the RACIE group were contacted by the BOR staff to begin a discussion on how to reformulate, revive RACIE.
  - RACIE representation consisted of only a few institutions so the thought was to expand to a broader network representing all USG institutions as well as reconsider the committee’s role beyond policy development.

- In 2008, Bob Boehmer led the effort to re-establish the committee which resulted in the writing of a charter for the committee, establishing a leadership structure, appointment by the president of each USG institution of a delegate with voting rights, welcoming of other institutional persons with responsibilities in IE and accreditation as affiliates, and structuring the committee into task groups to address issues related to effectiveness and accreditation.
  - Voting members plus affiliates will form task groups.
    - Five task groups established in Fall 2009 as an outcome of this process
  - Chairs of task groups would form the RACEA Executive Committee
    - Every year, voting members elect the RACEA chair, chair-elect and task group chairs

- Concerns
  - Need to establish priorities each year which then become the Task Groups
  - The foci of task groups may be confusing or become not as pressing for RACEA members

- Moving forward
  - RACEA membership to review annually initiatives and decide the focus for the group
  - Initiatives that are in progress should carry forward until completion
  - New initiatives may be brought forward for discussion for acceptance
  - Task groups may be reorganized each year based on membership expertise and focus

- Decision of Membership
  - Four Task Groups
    - Comprehensive Program Review Peer Review Process – continue
    - RACEA Resource Center – continue
    - RACEA Resource Guide – new
    - Identification of Emerging Issues – reorganized initiative

    - Breakout according to task group selection
    - Choose chair for task group

- Global Engagement – Kennesaw, QEP Year 2.5

Discussion:
- Planning and campus involvement
  - importance of faculty involvement
  - start about two years ahead of submission date
  - establish “brand equity” for your QEP. Some colleges avoid using the QEP label for the project once the project is initiated.
  - consider a planning survey
    - tie to strategic planning
    - choose from among most popular topics for QEP
    - hold forums, focus groups, etc. to discuss and select topic
- Design QEP with assessment in mind
  - determine learning outcomes first
  - include some formative assessment
- Focus is on changing the learning environment and impact
  - direct measures of student learning
  - measures of direct impact on student learning
  - recommend embedding QEP outcomes in the curriculum
- Budgets for QEPs can be highly variable

  - ~$10,000/year at Georgia Highlands College
  - ~$2 million at Kennesaw, but this includes centers devoted to global initiatives and other ongoing supporting functions; supported by a $14 student fee for global learning
  - QEP budget needs to be a line item in the institutional budget
  - financial strength in support of the QEP is a very important consideration for SACS review
- Evaluation of QEP
  - choose QEP evaluator carefully
Friday, February 25, 2011, continued
