HUMAN RESOURCES ADMINISTRATIVE MANUAL
EMPLOYEE RELATIONS: COOPERATION IN INTERNAL INVESTIGATIONS

Failure to cooperate fully shall be grounds for adverse action, including possible termination of employment.

In conducting an Internal Investigation, the investigator will notify only the appropriate administrators or individuals with a need to know. In addition to acting in the best interest of the institution, the investigator must assure that the investigation provides for due process.

Once a complaint or allegation is received, the investigator should notify the accused as soon as practical. The time frame of the notification will vary depending on the necessity to gather and/or clarify facts prior to the accused being approached. Additionally, the notification could be delayed in order to protect everyone involved, evidence, etc.

The accused should be given an opportunity to present their position relating to the allegation(s). At times, it may be necessary for this to occur in more than one sitting.

The investigator should gather as many facts and other forms of evidence as will allow the investigator to make a reasonable conclusion regarding the allegation(s).
