CHANCELLOR’S REPORT
Chancellor Wrigley began his report by commending the University System of Georgia (USG) institutions on a successful return to classes this fall. He emphasized the critical role the USG plays in raising education achievement in Georgia and reiterated the importance of in-person instruction to the academic experience, especially for the students who need the most support with finishing their degrees. Although space and other circumstances vary from campus to campus and may necessitate the use of hybrid or online courses, the USG is committed to increasing the number of in-person courses that are offered in the spring. Campuses will continue to deliver as much instruction in-person as possible, including using the entire day or Saturdays to schedule classes. He encouraged provosts, deans, and department heads to assure students and families that every campus is doing all it can to offer a meaningful on-campus experience, including activities and programming outside the classroom. The Chancellor also spoke of the need to remain vigilant as we prepare for the spring semester, including the use of masks, good hygiene, and not gathering in groups.

Chancellor Wrigley thanked Governor Brian Kemp for making more COVID-19 tests available to USG institutions. This semester, the USG will have acquired nearly 200,000 tests for campus, including almost 100,000 rapid antigen tests that started arriving last week. Additional rapid antigen tests are being made available to the USG’s three HBCU institutions through a White House initiative. These tests are in addition to the testing already taking place, whether through partnerships with public health, a local provider, conducted by the campus, or some combination of the three. Testing efforts have proven successful so far, as we have seen few cases on campus among faculty and staff, but we still need to be wary and alert. The Chancellor thanked Dr. Kathleen Toomey and the Georgia Department of Public Health for their outstanding support and assistance since March.

Chancellor Wrigley then mentioned several highlights from across the University System and spoke of his visits to a half-dozen USG campuses in the past several weeks. The USG recently inaugurated new facilities at the University of North Georgia and East Georgia State College, and USG presidents held their fall retreat at Middle Georgia State University. Fort Valley State University also hosted the annual meeting of the system staff council. Lastly, the USG will soon launch presidential searches at Georgia State University and Savannah State University (SSU). Chancellor Wrigley congratulated Georgia Highlands College, which will celebrate its 50th anniversary this fall. He also congratulated SSU students Karen Perez and Sade Shofidiya, whose charity recently won the top prize in the World Trade Centers Association Foundation’s annual global trade competition for students.
Lastly, he commended the Georgia Public Library Service, which was named Library Journal’s 2020 national Marketer of the Year.

Chancellor Wrigley concluded his remarks with a historical note. 138 years ago this month, Robert Goddard, who would later be known as the Father of the Space Age, was born. Mr. Goddard pioneered modern rocket propulsion and helped inspire America’s space program.
